

The Home Economics Kitchen.

Here in St. Louis we are very fortunate to have a state of the art Home Economics kitchen. Built in 2003 as part of our new school building programme, it is fully equipped with small and large modern appliances each of which aid the development of the culinary skills of our students. The kitchen also features individual student work units and a fully stocked library of cookery books which are available to all of our Home Economics students. Information Technology plays a central role in the teaching and learning that takes place in the kitchen through the means of a desktop computer, with internet access and a data projector.
